Biography

Kathryn Phillips is a motivating, dynamic, and thought-provoking presenter and consultant who believes that each child has the right to reach his or her fullest potential in a safe learning environment. In her work, she provides training and on-site consulting to make this vision a reality.

Ms. Phillips is the owner and president of Total Behavior Management, a college professor, published author, and has been a consultant to the Oregon Department of Education. Her experiences include classroom experience from kindergarten through high school, administration, international schooling, special education, and early childhood education.

In her nearly 30 years of experience as a trainer and consultant, Ms. Phillips has worked with thousands of educators, parents, health and legal professionals on a variety of educational issues, including comprehensive behavior management systems, effective parent involvement, and violence prevention. It is this depth and expertise, along with her skills in educating students with behavioral issues, that she brings to each presentation.
